While we see and experience considerable developments in teaching and learning with increased focus on holistic, student-centred learning, inclusion, creativity and life skills, tests do not always seem to reflect this methodology. This presentation investigates the differences between summative and formative assessment and their roles in today's classrooms, especially considering the needs and circumstances of children learning English in Ukraine. Assessment tasks and criteria as well as practical class tools that exploit the course book will be presented, leading us to consider the best ways to ensure that training and teaching are in harmony.

B2 First for Schools is intended to show that a student has the language skills they need to communicate in an English-speaking environment. However, how do we prepare students for this exam in order for them to achieve their potential? In this presentation, you will learn about what it is that Cambridge Assessment English expect from candidates in the reading paper of B2 First for Schools. You will learn what underlying cognitive processes each task type are testing and how we should approach each task type differently.
